

RKCSI Student Fellow: Courtenay Honeycutt

Courtenay Honeycutt is a Ph.D. student in the School of Library and Information Science at Indiana University. Her research interests include the social uses of ICTs in the promotion and use of minority languages online, focusing on Welsh. Specific research in this area includes an examination of interface localization by Welsh language bloggers, a social network analysis of Welsh language Facebook, and an analysis of Wales's campaign to win a sponsored top level domain, which was recently published in The Information Society. Other research interests include computer-mediated communication, online communities, and methods of identity management and presentation in online social spaces. Courtenay also serves as Editorial Assistant for Language@Internet under Editor-in-Chief Susan C. Herring. For more information, visit Courtenay's website at <http://ella.slis.indiana.edu/~clhoneyc/homepage/index.html>.

References

Honeycutt, C. (2008). Welsh without frontiers? Use of the community metaphor in Wales' sponsored top level domain bid. The Information Society, 24(4), 251-261. Abstract: <http://www.indiana.edu/~tisj/24/4/ab-honeycutt.html>

Honeycutt, C. (2008). User code modification as identity expression: A case study of Welsh language bloggers on Blogger.com. In F. Sudweeks, H. Hrachovec, & C. Ess (Eds.), Proceedings of the 2008 Cultural Attitudes towards Technology and Communication (CATaC) Conference (pp. 510-524). Murdoch, Australia: Murdoch University Press.

Honeycutt, C., & Cunliffe, D. (2008, forthcoming). (Re)Creating Welsh speaking communities in Facebook: An initial investigation. To be presented at the Association of Internet Researchers 9.0 Conference: Rethinking Community, Rethinking Place. Copenhagen, Denmark, October 16-18.