

RKCSI Student Fellow: Grant Simpson

Grant is a PhD student in the Department of English and an MIS student in the School of Library Science at Indiana University. His dissertation, Computing the English Middle Ages: The Hermeneutics of Electronic Objects and Processes, 1960-Present investigates medievalists' relationship to ICT, with specific emphasis on how they have made, used, and understood digital objects and processes. He is particularly interested in the social and institutional aspects of the digital humanities. His other interests include editing and textual criticism, digital preservation and forensics, and historical linguistics.
